Dear Parish Family,

On Tuesday, Bishop Cistone offered Mass at 10:00am for our students and parishioners, followed by a reception in the cafeteria. After meeting the adults, the bishop went to every classroom and spoke briefly with each grade. He then answered questions from the students. The bishop was very impressed with the students' attentiveness and their enthusiasm (even though we ran a little into lunch time.) He also commented on the beauty of our church building and parish facilities.

In the old convent above the door that goes out toward the school, there is a stained glass window with a coat-of-arms on it. I've looked into the meanings of the symbols, and wanted to share my findings with you. The black and white shield and the cross which is behind the shield are always part of the Dominican Orders' coat-of-arms in some way. If you look closely at the cross, you'll see that the beams of the cross have a white half and a dark half. This is also a symbol of the Dominican Order - preaching the Cross of Christ in order to bring light into the darkness of the world. The star at the top of the shield is a symbol of St. Dominic. The branch on the left is a lily, which is a symbol of St. Joseph. Originally this was because our parish is in the St. Joseph province of the Dominican sisters. But now, rather providentially, it ties in with our patron, St. Joseph the Worker. The branch on the right is a palm branch, which symbolizes martyrdom. This represents our parish's first patroness, St. Philomena, who was martyred for her faith. The Rosary, which drapes over the arms of the cross and hangs under the shield, was first introduced by St. Dominic. The dog is from a little joke which comes from a play on words. In Latin, the Dominicans are called 'Dominicanes.' If you split that word into two words (again working in Latin) you have 'Domini' and 'canes' - which means "the dogs of the Lord." The torch in the dog's mouth represents the "Light of the Gospel." The crown at the top of the cross, I think is a symbol of Our Lady, Queen of the Rosary. The scroll at the top contains the motto, 'Veritas,' which is 'Truth.' That is the motto of the Dominicans, and can be a guide for us in following Jesus Christ, Who is the Way, the Truth, and the Life.

Please continue praying for each other. See you at church! God bless you!

Fr. David

"When tempted, invoke your [Guardian] Angel. he is more eager to help you than you are to be helped! Ignore the devil and do not be afraid of him: He trembles and flees at the sight of your Guardian Angel."

— St. John Bosco (Feast day: January 31)
